

CALLAHAN UP FOR PERJURY

Preliminary Examination Begins Before Judge Vinsenzola in County Court.

SEVEN COUNTS IN THE INFORMATION

Testimony at Present Hearing Will Be Repetition of Part of the Evidence Given at Trial for Robbery.

The preliminary examination of James Callahan on the charge of perjury has begun before Judge Vinsenzola in the county court. This is the case in which Callahan is accused of testifying falsely at the time he was on trial for robbery.

The county attorney, in an opening statement to the court, said that he expected to prove that Callahan committed perjury when he swore that he had no mistake on December 19 and for two weeks prior thereto, when he swore that he was at John Arris' saloon about an hour during the forenoon of December 19, when he swore that he was never at the Melrose Hill house in which Eddie Cudahy was held a prisoner, when he swore that he was not with Crowe at the time the pony was purchased from Daniel Burris and had never talked with Burris.

Lester Macfarland made a long statement for the defendant, in which he denied that Callahan had willfully committed perjury at any stage of the trial for robbery. H. B. Boyles, court reporter for Judge Baker, was the first witness called.

He identified the transcript of the evidence given by Callahan in the district court, in order that it might be introduced in evidence in the perjury case. The testimony to be taken in the present examination will be practically the same as that given at the robbery trial, excepting that it will not be nearly so voluminous.

The state will merely undertake to show that parts of the material testimony given by Callahan in the district court are untrue. BARTLEY BOND CASE ON TRIAL.

For the Third Time District Court Hears Big Suit. For the third time the case of the state of Nebraska against the bondsmen of Joseph Bartley, former state treasurer, is on trial in the district court. It is to recover the amount of Bartley's default, which, with interest, amounts to something over $600,000.
